In Praise of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy.

There is no other medicine manufactured that has received so much praise and so many expressions of gratitude as Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. It is effective, and prompt relief follows its use. Grateful parents everywhere do not hesitate to testify to its merits for the benefit of others. It is a certain cure for croup and will prevent the attack if given at the first appearance of the disease. It is especially adapted to children, as it is pleasant to take and contains nothing injurious. Mr. E. A. Humphreys, a well known resident and clerk in the store of Mr. E. Lock, of Alice, Cape Colony, South Africa, says: "I have used Chamberlain's Cough Remedy to ward off croup and colds in my family. I found it to be very satisfactory and it gives me pleasure to recommend it." For sale by all druggists.

Futility of Grumbling.

A man never betters his condition financially by sitting around and grumbling because of the ease with which some get rich and the difficulty experienced by others in making a living. There can be no denying the inequalities of the distribution of the fruits of labor, and that the wicked often flourish like the green bay tree; but the sphere of no man's influence is so broad that he may hope to revolutionize society by pointing out its weakness. The reformer has his work in the world, but when he neglects his occupation as a bread-winner to exhaust his energies throwing hot air at people who are busy he is complicating matters for himself and family without remedying any of the evils of which he complains.

However distasteful it may be, we are obliged to take the world as we find it and make the most we can out of our harrowing environment; conditions are not so hard but any man of average ability, having health and energy to match, can make an honest living for himself and family if he will perform the duties of the hour with fidelity and zeal and let some one else do the grumbling.

If outside of regular work hours one may get the ear of society and whisper in it something it will remember and profit by, well and good; but no man ever rescued himself from the clutches of poverty by putting in his time bemoaning the selfishness of those better circumstanced when he ought to have been plowing for the next year's crop. —Nebraska State Journal.

La Grippe and Pneumonia.

Pneumonia often follows la grippe, but never follows the use of Foley's Honey and Tar. It cures la grippe, coughs, and prevents pneumonia and consumption. Ask for Foley's Honey and Tar and refuse any substitute offered. Mr. G. Vacher, of 157 Osgood street, Chicago, writes: "My wife had a severe case of la grippe three years ago, and it left her with a terrible cough. She tried a bottle of Foley's Honey and Tar and it gave immediate relief. A 50-cent bottle cured her cough entirely." Refuse substitutes. Sold by all dealers.

Mr. J. W. Perkins, Jr., of this county, was among our visitors Saturday, and left nice orders with us for printed stationery. He runs a large ginning and milling plant five and a half miles north of the city.

Mr. L. S. Crump, one of Leon's industrious and successful farmers, made us a very pleasant visit Saturday and reported that he had housed quite a large lot of various kinds of produce this year. He says the labor problem is the greatest drawback nowadays on the farm.

Mr. G. G. Gibbs and his son-in-law, Mr. H. P. Cone, are erecting an up-to-date wood yard at Frenchtown, just northwest of the city, equipped with the latest improved cutting and splitting machinery, and will soon be in shape to supply any kind of hard wood, cut any length desired.

Failed.

All efforts have failed to find a better remedy for coughs, colds and lung troubles than Foley's Honey and Tar. It stops the cough, heals the lungs and prevents serious results from a cold. J. N. Patterson, Nashua, Iowa, writes: "Last winter I had a bad cold on my lungs and tried at least half a dozen advertised cough medicines and had treatment from two physicians without getting any benefit. A friend recommended Foley's Honey and Tar and two-thirds of a bottle cured me. I consider it the greatest cough and lung medicine in the world." Sold by all dealers.

In a Glass House.

"If there is one thing more than another that makes me wild," said a member of the Mutual Improvement club to a friend, "it is to have that Potter woman correct me when I just make a slip of the tongue. Did you hear her say in that supercilious way of hers, 'My dear, I'm sure you could not have meant that they had music between each number'—you meant between every two numbers." And every one near us heard what she said, the cat!"

"Oh, I shouldn't mind her," said the other woman easily. "If you want revenge just look at her with one of those short waisted, pudgy daughters on either side at the assembly and not a man on the horizon."

"M-m!" said the aggrieved one. "Yes, she does look funny; but, my dear, did you realize you said 'on either side' instead of 'on each side'? Of course if they were on either side they'd—well, they couldn't be, you see! I knew you wouldn't mind having me speak of it, for I've noticed you make that little error occasionally, and it's so easy to form a habit."

Shocked the Queen.

The queen of Denmark once paid a visit to the Danish colony of Iceland, where the good old bishop exerted himself to the utmost to show her everything that was worth seeing. The queen paid many compliments to her host, and having learned that he was a family man graciously inquired how many children he had. It happens that the Danish word for "children" is almost identical in sound with the Icelandic word for "sheep," so that the worthy bishop, whose knowledge of Danish was not so complete as it might have been, understood her majesty to ask how many sheep he owned and promptly answered:

"Two hundred."

"Two hundred children!" cried the queen, astounded. "How can you possibly maintain such a number?"

"Easily enough, please your majesty," replied the prelate, with a cheerful smile. "In the summer I turn them out upon the hills to grass, and when winter comes I kill and eat them!"

The Miserable Moors.

The lives lived by the Moors are, without perhaps any exception, the most precarious and miserable that can be imagined. The poor man is thrown into prison for sums he never possessed and can never pay, the rich to be squeezed of all he possesses, while those only can hope to escape who are members of families sufficiently powerful to arouse the fears of the local governor should he attempt extortion and not sufficiently powerful to stir up the jealousy and avarice of the sultan. Even the governors of the provinces suffer themselves as they make others suffer, for just as they squeeze the agriculturist and the peasant so are they in turn squeezed by the sultan and his viziers, and should they fail by constant presents to maintain a good opinion at the court they can expect only imprisonment and often death.

The Only One of Its Kind.

On an evening somewhere about the end of the sixteenth century a traveler from Sweden might have been observed at the door of the Rose theater in London. He was going to see a new piece called "Titus Andronicus," and in order to follow it in the native language he bought a copy of the play, price sixpence, at the theater door. When he went home to Sweden he took the book with him to show his wife and friends what strange stuff the foreigner ranted. For 300 years it was preserved and in 1664, being discovered in the home of a countrywoman, was transferred for safety to the Lund university. The book is the only one of its kind known to exist.

Matchmaking in France.

A recent writer says of the commercial side of matchmaking in France: "In most French marriages money plays the important part. The first question asked by the young man is, 'How much?' As a rule, it is an easy matter to ascertain without applying directly to the papa, but even when no question of dowry is raised at the formal demand there is always a contract drawn up by a notary, which specifies the exact sum the girl receives."

A Man of Credit.

A distinguished Irish lawyer, always in impoverished circumstances, once took Chief Justice Whiteside to see his magnificently furnished new house in Dublin.

"Don't you think," he said, with a complacent look about, "that I deserve great credit for this?"

"Yes," the judge answered dryly, "and you appear to have got it."

A Serious Moment.

"Yes," said the married man meditatively, "when you see a woman hanging out a line of clothes and the line slips and lets the blessed lot down in the mud, that, my boy, is the psychological moment in which to leave that woman alone."

Last week Dr. Wm. J. Gunn brought us some fine samples of sweet potatoes; but on Tuesday evening he brought to this office some very fine samples of his second crop of Irish potatoes, which were raised in his garden from culls of the first crop, which were fine and which we believe would find ready sale on any market. Dr. Gunn always has a good garden, and is an enthusiast on what can be done gardening and trucking in Leon county.
